MARKETING MANAGER IS CONFERENCE PRESIDENT

The following article was written by Karl Karlson and published in the December 4th issue of the St. Paul, Mn. Pioneer Press.

"The United States and its farmers can continue to produce food for the world if the country is prepared to take some research risks and if the farmer can make a profit, according to the president of the 29th annual North Central Weed Control Conference currently at the St. Paul Hilton.

Kenneth Bradfield, market manager for the agriculture products division of Hahn, Inc., Evansville, In., at a panel press conference said "we as a group must convince others that certain risks are necessary if we are to fulfill our obligations in creating an environment for maximum food and fiber production."

Bradfield, whose firm makes machines for fertilizer applications, said the risks "are in research. We almost had (federal) regulations passed (governing research) that would have limited us to doing only what we know is safe.

"Research is dealing with the unknown...if you have no risk, you have no research," Bradfield said. He admitted industry, "because of the human equation, has made some boo-boos" which have damaged the environment.

"But until research comes up with something new, we have to use the tools we have now to grow the food and fiber we use and export," he said.

Bradfield was supported by R. Phillip Upchurch, research manager for Monsanto Agricultural Division, St. Louis, Mo., who said banning pesticides (as now being considered by the Minnesota Pollution Control Agency) "is too often viewed from an emotional viewpoint with the facts not fairly evaluated."

He said restraints should be on the federal level not the state level and if they are not "trivial and unwarranted, the chemical industry will work within them if they don't make the industry unprofitable."

Roy Kottmann dean of the College of Agriculture at Ohio State University, Columbus, Ohio, said computer projections show that the productivity of land can be increased four or five times what it is now "if research finds the technology to do so."

Indicating that most increased productivity would come through plant modification, Kottman predicted that production can double every 12 years. He said the computer analysis showed the possibility of raising 428 bushels of corn per acre compared with the present average of around 100 and soybean production of 250 bushels compared with the present average of around 30 bushels.

Bradfield added, "In our system, this sort of production will be achieved only if the farmers can make a profit at it. They don't raise food to feed the world's hungry or growing population, but to make a profit.

"The technology must be profitable to the farmer or he won't use it," he said. He predicted that with the current high fertilizer costs, crop size in the next few years will decline because farmers will be able to make a "better profit with 120 bushel-per-acre corn than by spending the money for extra fertilizer to raise 140-bushel corn."

Bradfield estimated that if all pesticides (herbicides, rodenticides, fungicides and insecticides) were banned from agricultural use, farm productivity would be cut in half.

HAHN EMPLOYEES JOIN CIVIL DEFENSE FORCE

Frank Noble and Ed Gibbs have completed 10 weeks training and met all qualifications for becoming members of the Evansville Civil Defense Police.

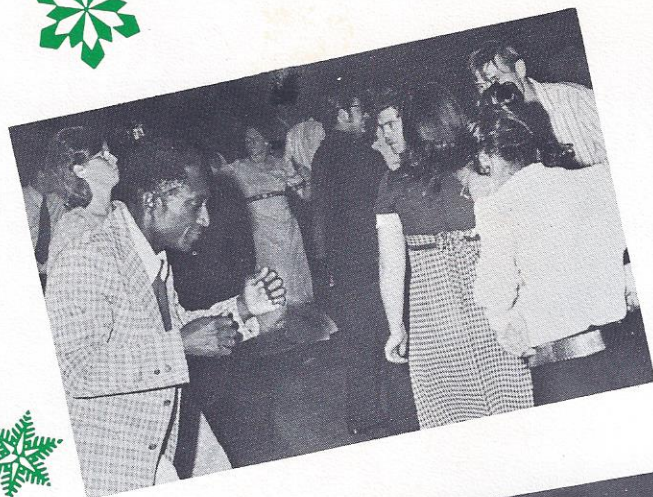

Both are now ready to serve their community in local events and disasters, working in this volunteer backup to our own paid city and county police departments.

We should be proud to know such people are willing to put in long hours without pay and few rewards to serve the people of this community.

UNITED WAY RESULTS

The 1974 United Way campaign concluded last month with 295 Hahn employees pledging the amount of $5,275.63.

WOMEN'S LIB STRIKES AGAIN.....

Or so it would seem as the first woman in the history of the HEA steps up to President. The office of President was left vacant when former President Rick Hampton left the company.

The new President of HEA is Janet Gregory, O.P.D. Sales, formerly Secretary/Treasurer. She will remain President for the remainder of Rick Hampton's term which ends in October, 1975.

Appointed to the position of Secretary/Treasurer on the Board of Directors will be Mrs. Sharry Carr, Marketing Dept., who will also serve until next years election.

HAM TIME

Once again, as in the past, H.E.A. presented Christmas Hams to all eligible employees. Certificates redeemable at Spauldings Market for an Agar canned ham were passed out December 13th to all employees who were hired on or before October 25, 1974, and were at work on Dec. 13th. This is one more example of how H.E.A., with your continued support is at work for you!

HEA LADIES NIGHT OUT 6 RMS RIV VU

By - Sharry Carr

Tuesday evening, December 3rd, found 42 Hahn women (employees) enjoying a good meal and a terrific show at the "Upstage Dinner Theater" in downtown Evansville.

Three door prizes were awarded and the lucky winners were Brenda Elvey, Carol Shoulders and Sharry Carr.

All who attended enjoyed the good service, good food and a funny, funny show. You gals who were unable to attend missed a great evening. All in all, the Winter, 1974, Ladies Night Out was termed a huge success.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

As a new, inexperienced President of H.E.A., I would like to extend my appreciation to everyone who pitched in and helped with all the plans for the Holiday Dance. And especially to everyone who gave of their own time to help with the decorating of the Gold Room. This, in my opinion, is what makes a good employees association. Thank you all...and I hope each of you have a very Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

--Janet Gregory

HOLIDAY SHUTDOWN SCHEDULE

The plant and office will be closed on December 23, 24 and 25 for the Christmas Holidays and on January 1 for New Years.

Each year the Factory Store provides LTD-500 Riders for the opening ceremonies at the Hadi Shrine Circus.

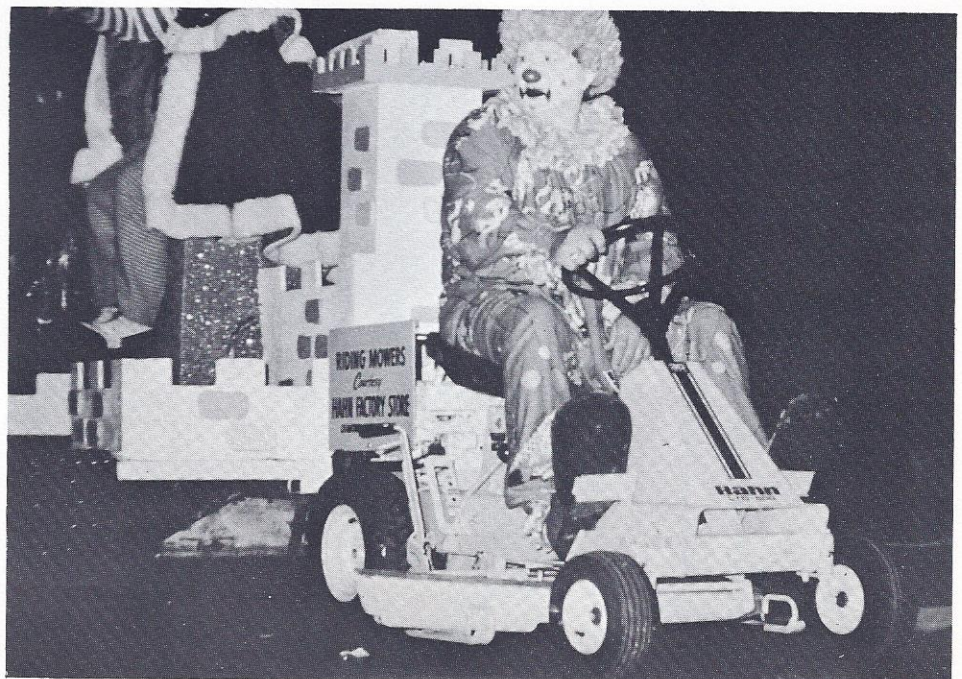

This year five riders were used in each of the performances. A total of 55,200 people attended the circus.

This is one of the many ways we expose our products to the people in the Tri-State area.

Marion Haley, recently retired Tool Room Supervisor, was the Shriners' Circus Chairman.
